A party of Topeka men who were in California a part of the summer, organized fishing parties for themselves, hired a big boat and caught mackerel for their daily breakfast fare. Dr. S. J. Crumline, Mr. O. E. Walker, Dr. R. S. Magee, Mr. R. A. Rutledge and Mr. J. J. Wood were members of this party. Dr. Crumline, who is a particularly enthusiastic fisherman, caught one of the biggest of the fish landed by the Kansas anglers. Tired of the fresh mackerel, they salted some of the fish and liked it so well that they brought a kit of it home with them.

The returned travelers had a mackerel breakfast Tuesday morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Walker of Park View Place. The meal was made up largely of California products, including honey from Dr. Magee's ranch in California, which the men of the company procured in the mountains, and fig marmalade which Mrs. Walker made while she was in the West.

One society editor who left the ink ways of her newspaper world for the wards of St. Luke's hospital in New York's great training school for nurses, Miss Ruth Frasier, formerly with the Wichita Beacon as its society editor and its "Cynthia Grey," is in the Red Cross work in Germany and expects to go to Moscow. A letter, censored by Ambassador Gerard, written on September 3, reached her old friends at the Beacon editorial rooms September 23. The envelope was slit clear across and reached the address in that condition through the department of state in Washington. Miss Frasier's letter is filled with the same vividness that was part of her newspaper work and her pictures of her work are very real. Soldiers, wounded badly, fall to her care, and on the night preceding the writing of her letter, Miss Frasier had removed the boots of one wounded soldier who had not had them off for three months, and the faces of the men in the transport had not been washed for twenty-two days. The Wichita Beacon planned the life of the hospital in Germany are as far removed as it is possible to imagine things.—Hutchinson Gazette.

So strict and straight-laced are our good villagers, that a certain society matron who occasionally takes a glass of cocoa-cola after breakfast, is spoken of as a drug fiend.

The Music Study club will meet Thursday afternoon promptly at 2:30 o'clock, at the home of Miss Peers,

VENUS NOT IN IT WITH THIS WOMAN

Miss Nana Sterling.

A host of judges in a contest recently conducted by a well known health magazine adjudged Miss Nana Sterling of Houston, Tex., the most perfectly formed American woman. Miss Sterling, who is 19 years old, is five feet six inches tall and weighs one hundred and thirty pounds when ready for the bath. Her bust and hips equally measure thirty-eight inches, her waist twenty-six inches, her neck thirteen inches and her calf fourteen inches.

The statue of the Venus de Medici, in the past regarded as the ideal type of womanly figure, is five feet six inches in height, and depicts a type that might weigh nearly as much as Miss Sterling, but would certainly be far less strong and active. Her chest measures over four inches less than Miss Sterling's, although her hips measure only one and one-half inches less. The judges in awarding the honor to Miss Sterling maintained that if the Venus de Milo or Medici does not like our big luscious American girl athletes, it is up to the Venus to play tennis and basketball. Miss Sterling is as strong as she is symmetrical, as her balancing and gymnastic work have put the strength of an athlete into her muscles.
